EINSTEIN'S THEORY ON LIGHT REJECTED

Baltimore Astronomer Says Entire Doctrine Will Have to Be Toned Down.

BALTIMORE, April 22.—Sharp disagreement with the Einstein conception of curvilinear light waves was expressed today by the Rev. Dr. W. E. Glanville, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Holy Innocents and well known astronomer. Of the Einstein theory as a whole, Dr. Glanville believes it will ultimately be contracted to much less revolutionary proportions, or else discarded.

The Baltimore astronomer, who is a member of British, French and American astronomical societies, does not credit the view that curvilinear light waves deceive scientists as to the position of heavenly bodies.

"I believe that the waves are rectilinear, absolutely," he said, "and we see the stars practically where they are, judged from our point of view. If light waves were curvilinear we should see millions of stars in the Southern hemisphere which are invisible to us. Curvilinear waves would lift the stars over the Southern horizon, so to speak—raise them up so that we should see them in a sort of mirage effect. We should be able to see Canopus, Alpha, Centauri, the Southern Cross and others not visible in this part of the world."

Dr. Glanville likened the Einstein theory to a newly discovered drug, which is brought forth and acclaimed as a panacea, and which experience relegates to a definitely limited place in the pharmacopoeia, or casts into the limbo of remedies tested and found wanting.

"The theory will have to be toned down," he declared. "Then it will either find its proper place in the store of scientific knowledge or will be exploded altogether. Such a theory is brought forward from time to time, inflated like a great, beautiful bubble. There have been scores of them."

Dr. Glanville declared that the idea of relativity is not altogether new, parts of it going back to Newton and Galileo. He is skeptical of the revolutionary character of the Einstein doctrine and confident that "the Newtonian doctrines of mechanics and dynamics have not even been shaken." With the view that the Einstein theory affords a solution of the variation of forty-three seconds a century in acceleration of the planet Mercury, Dr. Glanville is not in sympathy. He believes that this riddle will be solved by the discovery and application of some new factor in existing systems of astronomy, as the baffling problem of lunar acceleration was solved a century ago by the French scientist, La Place, who took into account the slow change in position of the major axis of the earth.

Dwarf Chases Full-Sized Man

Watchman Flees When Lilliputian Flashes Savage Looking Gun.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Giuseppe Bignol, who is three feet high and weighs forty-eight pounds, chased Ernest Cappelman, in charge of the freight entrance at Madison Square Garden, with a revolver yesterday for half an hour, and gave up the pursuit only because, as he told Magistrate Raphael Tobias in the Yorkville court, he couldn't shoot and run, too.

Bignol, who is a circus midgit, wanted to enter the building through the freight door, and was prevented by Cappelman, because there is a rule against it. Thereupon, Cappelman told the magistrate, Bignol jumped into the air and kicked him with both feet at once. Bignol left after he had been thrown out, Cappelman said, announcing that he would come back with a gun and kill the doorman.

Half an hour later the midgit edged up close to Cappelman, using the ample skirts of a stout woman for a shield, and, brandishing his revolver, ran after Cappelman, who disappeared down the runway at top speed.

Cappelman took to the sawdust, and Bignol was pursuing him around the big ring, when Patrolman Albert Malachuk, of the East Twenty-second street station, entered and placed the little man under arrest. When Bignol was arraigned Cappelman asked to be permitted to withdraw his complaint.

"This guy made an insulting remark about my size," Bignol told the magistrate, and added: "I'm not going to let any big fellow pick on me, your honor."

Magistrate Tobias held Bignol in $400 bonds for violation of the Sullivan law, and the dwarf produced $400 in Liberty bonds from his capacious side pockets, which was accepted.

EPISCOPAL CHILDREN'S HOME TO HAVE TAG DAY

Tomorrow will be tag day for the Episcopal Home for Children at the head of Talbot street in Anacostia. Collections will be used for the construction of an isolation building and an additional wing to the home. The tag day, in charge of Mrs. Charles L. Henry, has received the endorsement of Washington business men and also has the approval of the charity indorsement committee and the Episcopal diocesan board of social service.

"We need the funds to build a small isolation building where children of the home who become ill with contagious disease may be cared for," said Mrs. David Meade Lea, president of the board of lady managers.

MME. JULIA CULP IS HEARD AT NATIONAL

Belgian Singer of Ballads, Lieders and Lullabies Is Enthusiastically Received.

Mme. Julia Culp, Belgian singer of ballads, lieder, and lullabies, was enthusiastically greeted at the National Theater yesterday afternoon in her recital which had been postponed previously because of illness.

Wonderfully full, smooth tones, perfect phrasing and remarkable breath control mark the work of this singer. Her program yesterday was long, including seventeen numbers, every one of which was warmly applauded.

Perhaps the most artistic number on the program was the exquisite Schubert "Ave Maria," expressing the well-being of a nation, and the word of the Lord, was sung with stirring fervor and warmth of expression. The "Dutch Serenade" is a hauntingly beautiful little thing, and was splendidly suited to the singer.

The charm of Mme. Culp's art was greatly enhanced by her accompanist, Conrad V. Bos. Other numbers of her program were the Beethoven "Adelaide," four Schubert compositions, "Der Lindenbaum," "An eine Quelle," "Seligkeit," and the "Ave Maria"; "Seligkeit," and the "Les Cloches," and the beautiful love song, "Green"; Tchaikovsky's "Pendant le bal"; the wonderful old French "Berceuse" describing the fate of two lovers who were lost at sea; John Alden Carpenter's dainty "When I Bring Coloured Toys"; Roger Quilter's "O Mistress Mine"; two old Scotch folksongs, "Ye Hanks and Braes" and "The Cottage Maid"; and that tender old English song, the refrain of which is perhaps as familiar as anything in music, "Long, Long Ago."

Rome Is 2,674 Years Old.
 ROME, April 22.—Rome yesterday celebrated her 2,674th birthday, or anniversary of her foundation. The city was gay with bunting.
